Juan Diego Florez was just 12 years old when he started selling candy on the streets of Lima, Peru. He would wake up at 4am every day to buy candy from a local market and then spend the rest of the day selling it on the streets. It was a tough life, but Juan Diego was determined to make a better future for himself.

When Juan Diego was 18 years old, he decided to leave Peru and move to the United States. He arrived in New York City with just $100 in his pocket and no place to stay. He slept on the streets for several weeks before he was finally able to find a job as a dishwasher in a restaurant.

Juan Diego worked hard and saved his money. After a few years, he was able to start his own small business, selling clothes on the street. He worked long hours and often slept in his car, but he was determined to make his business a success.

In 2010, Juan Diego's business was finally profitable enough to rent a small store. He named his store "Juan Diego's" and began selling clothes, shoes, and accessories. The store was a success, and Juan Diego was able to hire several employees.

In 2015, Juan Diego's business was ng so well that he was able to open a second store. He also started a line of clothing that he sold in his stores and online. Today, Juan Diego is the CEO of his own successful business.

He has two stores in New York City and a line of clothing that is sold in stores across the country.
