Shropshire Blue has a long history, dating back to the 12th century. It is thought to have been first made by monks at the Abbey of Haughmond in Shropshire. The cheese was originally called "Shropshire Stilton", but the name was changed to "Shropshire Blue" in the 19th century to avoid confusion with the Stilton cheese produced in Leicestershire.

Shropshire Blue is a versatile cheese that can be used in a variety of dishes. It is often served as a dessert cheese, but it can also be used in salads, sandwiches, and casseroles. Shropshire Blue has a strong flavor that can be overpowering for some people, but it is a favorite among cheese lovers.
