

The Watchtower's Earthwatch Cortese: A Comprehensive Analysis of Its Role, Features, and Impact on Environmental Stewardship

In the face of the growing environmental crisis, The Watchtower Society, the governing body of Jehovah's Witnesses, has launched a groundbreaking initiative called Earthwatch Cortese. This comprehensive program, named after the organization's former president, Theodore Jaracz, aims to instill a profound sense of stewardship for the planet in its members and beyond.

Earthwatch Cortese is not merely a passive educational campaign; it actively engages participants in various projects and programs designed to protect and restore the environment. This article delves into the multifaceted nature of this program, exploring its objectives, key features, and the impact it has had on environmental consciousness and action.
